[Written for the Roundabout.] An Episode—An Engineer's Story.

BY N S. C.

"The train's not due, sir?
On! tell me it's not gone!
For I have walked from Lancaster,
And feel almost broke down,
And feel almost broke down,
And from all that I hear say
Among the number that are killed
I'll find my son to-day."

I'll mat my son to-day."

'The ears not due for hours mum,"
I ventured to explain.

'But I have orders and will run
To-day an extra train
am starting noy material to the starting noy with me—"

'I have no money, sir, my fare?"

'We'll trust to tiod you see,"

At this the mother bowed her head, A tour fel on my hand, and fully understand! How much I need it is nelly to-day, Adiying down the road.

Adiying down the road.

That fearful ride shall I longer?

I feed the same thrull now.
When memory advas the lower way, Adiying down the road.

When memory advas the drow.
I feel the boy as she had said among the many shin.

I never saw again.

GEORGE A. LEWIS. Editor and Publisher.

FRANKFORT, APRIL 9, 1887.

We are authorized by Judge W. P. Bush to say, that everything in regard to the new railroad from this city to Georgetown and Paris is favorable. So we may expect the railroad question from the Episcopal Church, of to be booming in a few days. Let it come, for we need something to liven up the old town badly.

The Railroad

There seems, just now, a sort of breathing spell in the progress of railroad matters. The failure of the nomination for the Legislathe parties, whose financial ability was looked to to perfect the plans of the local communities, to put in an appearance at the time agreed upon, has proven something of a damper.

This need not, however, block the active and vigorous efforts of our people to find outlets for our sendence and inters for what we have a subject to the control of the co This need not, however, block our people to find duties of the products, and inlets for what we buy abroad. If one plan fails to render satisfactory results, others witzer, Saturday, May 21, 7 p. can be tried. Yet, the disappointment may only be temporary, and the capitalist interested in the completion of the Frankfort, Georgetown and Paris Railroad may be busily engaged in perfecting plans for its construction.

The road will be built, sooner or later, and if the present charter owners and their capitalists do not find it convenient or to their interests to presently push the enter-prise, other charters can be obtained and a new beginning made.

We are not without hope that the movement recently begun will be quickly taken hold of again, and satisfactory results attained.

Death's Record.

Anyone acquainted with our city cannot fail to have noticed, within the past few weeks, the absence of many who were once familiar on our streets. This is especially noticeable among our mechanics and workmen generally, as numbers of them have left to obtain employment in other cities and other States; while the favorable reports sent back by those already gone have caused many to prepare to leave in the near future. Mechanics in the building trade say that never, within the last twenty years, has there been less work at this season of the year or duller prospects ahead. Young men living in the country who are charmed with city life and contemplate moving town should make a note of this and secure employment before coming to Frankfort.

Exclusive Privileges

Editor Roundabout:

Through the columns of your last issue I took occasion to comment on the Frankfort Heating ment on the Frankfort Heating Company's claim to "exclusive privilege," little dreaming that I had committed any offense for which I should beg the pardon of any one, but it seems that the edi-tor of the Western Argus, either ignorantly or purposely miscon-struing my meaning, has constistruing my meaning, has consti-tuted himself a censor of the press and undertaken to read me a homily upom my conduct as a citizen. For this purpose he has devoted a "leader," of a column in length, to personal abuse. This serves to fill up his bantling paper not yet out of its swaddling clothes, his witicisms fail to excite either mirth or merit a sensible thought. I rather pity than blame him, when I remember that this is him, when I remember that this is his first newspaper venture, and cherish the hope that he will improve as he gains experience.

The editor of the Argus insists that I was attempting to "write down the enterprise" of the citizens who are undertaking to put the Frankfort Heating Company in operation. None but the eyes of the Argus could discover such deformity in my words, while every one else at a glance would see that I only endeavored to arouse an interest among the lovers of our Frankfort prosperity that would induce them to come that would induce them to come forward and share the rich harvest in store for all who would venture in store for all who would venture a few dollars in natural gas enterprises which can thrive without the protection of "exclusive privileges." According to the Argus a natural gas well can be sunk the required depth, 1,500 feet, at a cost of about $3,000. Certainly more than one company of our citizens can be formed to engage in enterprises requiring no greater outlay. This was my opinion, and it has been verified, for since your last issue the Frankfort Natural Gas and Oil Company has been organized and will begin op-

I have asked a civil question, and the Argus gave no answer but tirade and bluster. It played the part of the cuttle fish by blackening the waters with the pollutions eminating from itself in the faces of those who eagerly pursue in those hose who eagerly pursue in search of knowledge. Whenever search of knowledge. Whenever the people of Frankfort can gulp down all the ranc of the Argus with a relish, in preference to reason that any one can see, I shall expect the Frankfort Heating Company to rivet its chains upon all, and not before.

all, and not before.

Again, the eyes of the Argus have discovered that I 'never expended a dollar for a public enterprise in my life." The stock of mud is inexhaustible. This charge is false. It would be indelicate is false. It would be indelicate for me to speak in praise of my self, and will only mention one investment of $1.50 subscription to the Argus, shich has afforded very little profit. Will add that the editor of the Argus was never known to invest a dollar unless at least two others were jingling in sight. The Argus refuses to say that the Frankfort Heating Company will render any public service in con-Frankfort Heating Company will render any public service in consideration of its "exclusive privilege," but promises that in the "sweet bye-and-bye" it will give cheaper fuel. Cheaper fuel may be had by the completion of the Kentucky river improvement, or by building a railroad from Frankfort into the coal regions, but no body wants an exclusive privilege to sell-coal in Frankfort on account of either of these improvecount of either of these improve-

Constitutional opinions seem to be very uppalatable to the Argus at present. It wants the citizens of Frankfort to lay low and wait for the Frankfort Heating Compa for the Frankfort Heating Compa ny to bring its "wooden barse" safe into the walls of the city without a murmur. Will all fall down and worship this God? If so, we will find too late that the days of our mourning are at hand.

The editor of the Argus seems to entertain very variable notions on the subject of monopolies, for less than a month ago a "leader" less than a month ago a 'leader' appeared devoted entirely to the iniquities and oppressions resulting from the present system of Fublic Printing and Binding done by an elected officer, and praising the system of letting to the lowest the system of letting to the lowest and best bidder, where competition should be free to all. Now he cries loudly for protection to his natural gas monopoly. Why this sudden change in his views? Per-haps the difference "depends upon whose ox is gored."

"Natural Gas."

The city is full of it. Why go to the expense of boring thousands to the expense of boring thousands of feet into old mother earth when there is so much of it floating about on the surface? The only trouble we apprehend is in getting pipes of sufficient strength to confine it. There is enough "gas" wasted on the corner of Main and St. Chir streets, shill, if prepared St. Clair streets daily, if properly confined, to blow the city to "smithereens," not to speak of the other notable "gas wells" in the city.

Don't Experiment.

Pon't Experiment.
You cannot afford to waste time in experimenting when your lungs are in danger. Consumption always seems at first, only a cold. Do not permit any dealer to impose upon the cold, which is the cold of the cold, which is the cold of the cold, which is the cold of the cold, or lost the cold, or just the same bon't be deceived, but miss type of the cold, or just the same bon't be deceived, but insist upon getting Dr. King's New Discovery which is guaranteed to give relief in all Throat, Lung and Chest affections. Trial bottles free at Jos. LeCompte's Drug Store, Large Bottles 81.
